

Crown Prince Hassan to visit Qatar

AMMAN (J.T.) - His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan will visit Qatar for two days from Sunday, the official Qatari News Agency said Saturday. It said the visit showed Jordan and Qatar wanted to strengthen brotherly ties. A Jordanian minister said last month that relations with most Gulf Arab states had improved since the Gulf war, though he saw no immediate prospect of better relations with Kuwait. The Crown Prince and Her Royal Highness Princess Sarvath Saturday returned to Amman after attending the funeral of King Baudouin of Belgium in Brussels. In a later dispatch, the Jordan News Agency, Petra, confirmed the visit and said it was being made in response to an invitation from Qatari Crown Prince Sheikh Hamad Ben Khalifa Al Thani.

Instead of amending or changing the Election Law through a provisional legislation, thus incurring the wrath of the opposition, which has said it would contest any electoral change that is not passed by Parliament, the government may use administrative provisions to bring about the desired change.

The current Election Law has been interpreted to mean that voters have as many votes as the number of seats in their constituencies, even though it does not state that directly. However, sources say, the government may offer a new interpretation of the law, to mean that voters can cast their ballot for only one candidate, and enforce it through administrative orders. The government has the legal authority to issue regulations explaining the provisions of laws.

U.S. refuses Jordan's F-5 sale to Indonesia, releases $50m in aid

By P.V. Vivekanand Jordan Times Staff Reporter

AMMAN - Jordanian officials Saturday declined comment on a reported rejection by the U.S. government of Jordan's request for permission to sell American-made F-5 planes to Indonesia, but informed sources said the U.S. move came as no surprise. At the same time, the sources also confirmed that Washington had released $50 million in frozen assistance to Jordan for fiscal year 1993 af-ter formal procedures related to clearance from Congress were completed.

According to the sources, the rejection of the F-5 deal was partly based on Washington's concern for the human rights record of Indonesia and that it had no bearing on U.S.-Jordanian relations.

'We knew we were heading into trouble in Congress over the proposed sale since Washington was citing human rights concerns," said an informed Jordanian source. "But our counter-argument had been that how much human rights can anyone violate with

The source, who spoke to the Jordan Times on condition of anonymity, said the King-

BEIRUT (Agencies) — Lebanese troops will start de-policed by U.N. peacekeepers, the sources told Reuters. The Lebanese government last week ordered the army into villages facing Israel's self-declared "security zone" after a U.S.mediated ceasefire halted a weeklong Israeli air and artillery bombardment of the south. The sources said the deployment was aimed at maintaining security in villages used by pro-Iranian Hizbollah (Party of God) guerrillas to attack Israeli forces in the zone.

Lebanese officials, who say resistance to the Israeli occupation of South Lebanon is legitimate, have said the army would not disarm the guerrillas or stop them from attacking Israeli forces.

Lebanese Defence Minister Mohsen Dallui travelled to Damascus to consult with leaders of Syria, the main foreign power broker in Lebanon, about plans to deploy the army in areas from where the guerrillas launched attacks on Israel.

Syria was convinced particularly by parliamentry leader Nabih Berri about the need for the deployment," a colleague of Mr. Berri's said. Mr. Berri heads the pro-Syrian Amal movement, which rivals Hizbollah for influence among the Shi'ite Muslims of South Lebanon.

"The suffering the people endured under a week of Israeli bombardment must lead to something. Lebanon cannot just be happy with a ceasefire and turn the page as if nothing happened," a source close to the government

Mr. Dallul Friday asked the army's commander-in-chief to have his forces prepare to deploy in areas patrolled by United Nations Interim Forces In Lebanon troops in 70 villages in an area (UNIFIL) but where Hizbollah guerrillas also operate.

Security officials said Saturday that hundreds of South Lebanese villagers protested against the guerrilla rocket attacks which led to the Israeli assault. Residents of Qlaileh, Hinniyeh, Manesuri and Issiyeh blocked the main road on Friday between the port of Tyre and Naqura, UNIFIL headquarters, chanting: "No to Katyusha rocket attacks from our villages, yes to the deployment of the Lebanese army.

The protesters refused to go back to their villages and have moved in to half-built apartment blocks, the officials said. The outskirts of their villages were bombarded by Israel's proxy South Lebanon Army (SLA) after guerrillas fired seven rockets at the SLA in Israel's selfdeclared "security zone" Thursday and Friday. Beirut announced the planned deployment of troops in the south on Monday, two days after Israel stopped its blitz on the "understanding" that Syria and Lebanon would pressure Hizbollah to stop rocket attacks on northern Israel. Israel and the United States have both welcomed the planned deployment. Officials have not said whether the move, agreed to by U.N. Secretary General Boutros Ghali. was part of the deal to end the fighting. A source close to the government here said Beirut wants to "strike when the iron is hot and exploit the chaos among the people who see the Lebanese army as their saviour."

Lebanese army poised Hamas claims attacks

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM (AFP) — The Islamic Resistance Movement Hamas carried out an attack that left two Israeli soldiers and a Palestinian dead, a caller claiming to belong to the movement said Saturday.

Ezzedin Al Kassam, the armed wing of Hamas, carried out Friday's attack on the soldiers near the occupied West Bank village of Beir Ballut, the anonymous caller told an international news agency here.

Two soldiers were killed by the attackers, while a third soldier returned fire, killing one of the guerrillas. Another attacker was captured, while a third fled in a General Schmuel Arad, the head of operations for the chief of staff, said earlier that he believed Hamas was behind the attack.

Deputy Defence Minister Motta Gur told Israeli radio meanwhile that attacks against Israelis in the occupied territories would increase with progress in the Middle East peace talks, which are opposed by Hamas and other fundamentalist groups.

"We are going to witness a wave of attacks against civilians and soldiers in the (occupied) territories as the peace process advances," Mr. Gur said.

"This situation forces us to rethink our methods for curbing attacks, although some have already been improved," he said, without elaborating.

The body of another Israeli soldier was found Friday. He had been kidnapped and killed while hitch-hiking on the West Bank. The Islamic Jihad in Palestine

Saturday claimed responsibility for an attack in which two Israeli soldiers were injured on the occupied West Bank.

Somali clan elders sign peace accord

KISMAYU (Agencies) - Jubilant elders from some 20 Somali clans have signed a United Nations-brokered peace accord, urging rival militias in the south of the country to disarm and cooperate with U.N. peacekeep-

But neither of the two main militias at whom the agreement was directed were represented at the formal signing ceremony in the southern port of Kismayu.

"We have to forgive and forget the past. This is the first step towards peace. We must continue until we rebuild our nation," said Aden Abdullah Osman, the country's first president at indépendence in 1960, who also attended.

The elders are the traditional arbiters of disputes in Somalia and the U.N. is keen to enhance their authority as a counterweight to the warlords holding the country to ransom.

Mr. Ali Mahdi is General Aideed's arch-enemy. Political analysts said his presence at the Kismayu ceremony was a risky move on the U.N.'s part and would align the world body with his clan faction in the eyes of Aideed supporters.

ABU DHABI (AFP) - The United Arab Emirates (UAE) on Friday marked 27 years of the accession to the throne by its ruler Sheikh Zayed Ben Sultan Al Nahayan, who unified seven impoverished sheikhdoms into a prosperous state.

More than two million flags and lamps adorned the streets and the country's rulers marked the occasion with pledges to stick to the merge that has survived several setbacks during its 22-year life. Sheikh Zayed, whose name hit world headlines over the collapse of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), took over as ruler of Abu Dhabi on Aug. 6, 1966, after a tribal decision found his elder brother, Sheikh Shakhbout, unfit to rule.

Rafsanjani to change 6 ministers

TEHRAN (R) — Iranian President Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani is expected to change six cabinet ministers on Sunday, including defence and interior, Iranian radio reported on Saturday.

Mr. Rafsanjani, 58, was sworn in for his second term as president on Wednesday. The official Iranian News Agency (IRNA) quoted reliable sources as saying he would soon change the ministers of defence interior, commerce, housing and health.

But Tehran Radio, quoting in-formed sources, said "six new ministers are expected to be on the president's list to be given to the Mailis."

The six also included the road and transport minister, it said. Neither the radio nor IRNA mentioned any expected changes in the Oil Ministry, currently headed by Gholamreza Aqazadeh. Iran is the second largest producer in the 12-nation Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

IRNA said Deputy Foreign Minister Ali Mohammad Besharati, who for years has been involved in Tehran's efforts to ease often tense ties with its Gulf Arab neighbours, was expected to become interior minister.

It said a former governor of Khuzestan Province, General Mohammad Farouzandeh, would be nominated to replace current Defence and Armed Forces Logistics Minister Akbar Torak. Iran, starved of spare parts for its Western military hardware purchased before the 1979 Islamic revolution, has embarked on an ambitious rearmament prog-ramme since the end of its 1980-88 war with Iraq. It has since concluded several

Lebanese kidnapper returns home

BEIRUT (Agencies) — Abbas Hamadi, the only man ever arrested for kidnapping Westerners in Lebanon, returned a free man to Beirut from a German jail Friday and was whisked off to a family reupion.

A convoy carrying officials of the pro-Iranian movement Hizbollah and members of the Hamadi family left Beirut airport at high speed about 30 minutes after a scheduled flight with Mr. Abbas aboard arrived from Frankfurt.

The convoy included Mr. Abbas's father Ali, who was smiling, and his elder brother Abdul Hadi, Hizbollah's security chief.

Police at the airport stopped journalists seeing 34-year-old Abbas, deported by Germany on Friday after serving half his 13year prison term for kidnapping wo German businessmen. He was later taken to a hospital in Beirut's southern suburbs, a bastion of Hizbollah (Party of God) for a checkup. He became angry when Hizbollah members stopped photographers taking pictures of him and said they should be allowed to do so. Mr. Abbas, a Shiite Muslim, was jailed in 1988 for kidnapping businessmen Rudolf Cordes and Alfred Schmidt in Beirut in 1987 in an attempt to win freedom for his younger brother. Mohammad Ali, who is serving life in Germany for kidnapping and murder.

The two businessmen were later released unharmed. Family supporters seized Ger-

Mr. Kemptner and Mr. Struebig were freed in June 1992 after more than three years of confinement. Germany insists no deal was made with the kidnappers but it reunited the two brothers in Saarbruecken prison in what it called a humanitarian gesture.

Journalists caught up with Hamadi at Hizbollah's Great Prophet Mosque near the airport, where his mother and other family members were waiting for him. Ali and Fatima Hamadi hugged their son, tears streaming down their faces. His German wife, wearing a scarf, followed them into the mosque, Mr. Hamadi then recited the first verse of The Koran before shaking hands with all eight parliament members of Hizboliah. The reunion lasted about 10 minutes after which Mr. Hamadi left with his family to an undetermined destination.

A police officer, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Mr. Hamadi is not wanted on any charge in Lebanon.

The government issued an amnesty in 1991 for crimes committed during Lebanon's 1975-1990 civil war and is expected to resolve shortly whether this amnesty covered Mr. Hamadi.

Mr. Hamadi is believed to have headed either to Abdul Hadi's house in south Beirut or straight to his parents' home in the village of Sowwaneh in south Lebanon. Mr. Hamadi figured in one of the most spectacular affairs to hit Germany in years.

Mr. Hamadi was arrested Jan.

where his brother Mohammad Ali Hamadi was taken into custody 13 days earlier. A Duesseldorf court sentenced him to 13 years for the capture of Mr. Cordes and Mr. Schmidt in January 1987. Both were released months later. The abduction was designed to barter the two German hostages for the freedom of his brother Mohammad Ali, who was sentenced in May 1987 to life imprisonment for the 1985 hijacking. There has been widespread speculation that Mr. Abbas was freed as part of a deal with the Bonn government that led to the release of German hostages in Lebanon.

But Federal Justice Minister Sabine Leutheuser-Schnarrenberger told German national television Friday "there was no deal," repeating the govern-ment's long-standing denial of the speculation.

Though not eligible for parole. Mr. Abbas was given early release under a law that permits a foreigner to be set free and immediately deported.

Abbas Hamadi, a Hizbollah member, left the maximumsecurity penitentiary in the far western state of Saarland at 7:30 a.m. (5:30 GMT) in a police convoy headed for Frankfurt airport. Two members of the German border police escorted him onto the MEA airliner that took off at 3 p.m. (1300 GMT). The United States had demanded Mohammad's extradition. However, the Bonn government refused on the grounds that the country's law bans handing over defendants to countries where they could face the death penalty.

Washington has no direct interest in Abbas Hamadi but has been watching the case because his brother killed a U.S. citizen. Iran intervened strongly with

Germany in an attempt to gain the release of both Hamadi

Gunmen steal explosives from Cairo stores

CAIRO (AFP) - Armed men stole two truckloads of explosives from a warehouse north of the Egyptian capital amid growing concern over Islamic militant bombings, police said. Six gumme late Friday broke into a quarry company's warehouse in Abi Zaabal, 30 kilometres north of here, and "seized a large quantity material used to make explosives as well as 1,000 metres of fuse police said. They shot a guard twice in the shoulder after he tried to stop them. Security services detained several people for questioning, but it was not clear if the incident was carried out by Islamic militants blamed for a series of fatal bombings in Cairo this year. It came two days after police arrested 30 militants in the the same

Turkey seizes 1.4 tonnes of hashish

ANKARA (R) - Turkish security forces have seized 1.354 kilogrammes of hashish in southeast Turkey and arrested five people, Anatolian news agency said. It said the street value of the haul, confiscated on Wednesday, was $1.1 million.

Protest in Chad after civilians slain

N'DJAMENA (R) - At least one demonstrator was killed in the town of Abeche in eastern Chad Friday when angry residents rioted in protest at the slaying of scores of civilians on Wednesday, government sources said. They said hundreds of protesters sacked the police and customs stations and looted bars. Security forces shot dead at least one person and wounded five, the sources said in the captial N'djamena. According to the latest official death toll, 64 civilians were killed and 80 wounded on Wednesday in a village about 100 kilometres from Abeche. The government blamed group of armed men" without saying whether they were soldiers or rebels. It sent a commission of inquiry to the area, close to the border with Sudan. Chad's human rights league said in a statement on Thursday that 68 civilians were killed when armed men attacked them at a crowded weekly market.

Four Iranians flee Cyprus prison

NICOSIA (R) — Cyprus police were searching on Saturday for four young Iranians who escaped from Nieosia's central prison one day before they were to be deported. "We believe they are still on the island and we are going to get them. We are amazed at how they managed to escape," a police spokesman told Reuters. "They must have left sometime on Friday afternoon before dinner time. They were to be sent home today. Their visas had expired," he added. The four were arrested on Tuesday. Police could not say they were students or guest workers. Four prison guards were detained after the escape.

Kuwait to sign defence pact with Russia

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwait will sign a defence pact with Russia next month, Defence Minister Sheikh Ali Al Sabah was quoted Saturday as saying. Sheikh Ali said he will leave for Moscow on Sept. 23 to sign an agreement that was originally scheduled to be signed this month, Al Anba newspaper reported. The signing was postponed at Russia's request. Since Kuwait's liberation in 1991 from seven months of Iraqi occupation, the emirate has signed 10-year military agreements with the United States, Britain and France. All three countries are permanent members of the U.N

U.N. envoy meets Sudanese foreign minister

KHARTOUM (R) — Foreign Minister Hussein Suleiman Abu Saleh has met the special U.N. envoy for humanitarian affairs in Sudan, Vierri Traxler, and said his government was supplying food and other aid to war-torn southern Sudan. He told Mr. Traxler on Friday that the government had supported United Nations relief efforts in southern Sudan by supplying 153,000 tonnes of sorghuin, the Sudan News Agency (SUNA) reported. He added that his government had signed many agreements dealing with the supply of relief aid to southern Sudan. Mr. Traxler, an Italian who arrived in Khartoum on Thursday, has toured several African capitals to persuade Sudan's neighbours to press Sudan and the rebel Sudan; People's Liberation Army to give aid workers more access to famine-hit areas. Relief agencies say up to two million people ask starvation. Sudan had previously refused to receive Mr. Traxer, who was appointed last May, because of the ambiguity survival sudantific. his mission. Mr. Abu Saleh said in June that if he visited Sudan for relief and humanitarian work, he was welcome. But if he was on a political assignment, then he had no role to play in Sudan.

U.S. court does not say how long Demjanjuk could stay

CINCINNATI (AP) — A federal appeals court refused to say how long John Demjanjuk can stay in the United States if he is allowed to leave Israel. The Sixth U.S. Circuit Court of appeals on Friday rejected a Justice Department request that Demjanjuk be kicked out of the United States as soon as the court's investigation into his 1986 extradition to Israel is over. But the court also rejected a request from Demjanjuk's lawyers that he be allowed to stay in the United States indefinitely. The court is to hear arguments on the extradition on Sept. 3. It said it would decide after that how long Demjanjuk can stay. On Tuesday, the court said Demjanjuk, 73, should be allowed to return to the United States during its

Mediators press on to free hostages

MUS, Turkey (AFP) - Mediators trying to free six western hostages held by Kurdish rebels blamed the Turkish security forces Saturday for the failure of their efforts. Mediator Ismet Imset. editor of the Turkish Daily News, said in this southeast town that had made two attempts in the past three days to secure the release of the tourists — four Frenchmen, a Briton and an Australian woman - kidnapped by the Kurdish Labour Party (PKK) is eastern Turkey last month. Both attempts had failed owing to the Turkish army's security measures, said Mr. Imset. "When on Thursday we went to the place where the hostages were supposed to be released, we found it was surrounded by Turkish security forces," Mr. Imset told AFP. His fellow mediators are Bernard Granjon, head of the French aid organisation Medecins du Monde, and Yavuz Onen, director of the Turkish Human Rights Founda-

6TH ANNUAL YOUNG WOMEN'S GATHER-ING: Her Majesty Queen Noor Saturday inaugurated the 6th annual national gathering of young Jordanian women living abroad. The gathering, which is opened annually by the Queen, was sponsored by Ministry of Youth and was held at the permanent Youth Camp in Ailoun. Established in 1986, the camp aims at increasing national socio-cultural awareness among young Jordanian women living abroad. By encouraging cultural communication among such women, it enriches their knowledge about their country's scientific, cultural and historic heritages. This year's gathering hosted 110 Jordanian women between the ages of 18-27, of whom 30 were from Jordanian

ZARQA (Petra) — With the growing demand for land at the free zone near Zarqa, the Free Zones Corporation (FZC) has announced a tender for the development of 300 dunums to include the required infrastructure for projects, according to Riad Arafat, the FZC director in Zar-

Mr. Arafat said the FZC in Zarqa has witnessed increased de-mand by investors to set up factories and storage facilities for goods that are normally re-exported.

Following the Gulf crisis and despite the U.N. imposed sanctions on Iraq which have adversely affected shipping operations to Jordan's port of Aqaba, the FZC in Zarga has seen a flurry of import-export activity, said Mr.

It is certain that the stable political situation and security in Jordan have attracted a great number of investors to the free zones, Mr. Arafat maintained.

He added that the Zarqa FZC assumes importance as it lies near the international routes linking Jordan with neighbouring Arab countries.

The Zarqa zone, which has an area of $5.5 million square metres, currently comprises 15 factories with a total JD 28 million capital, stores and warehouses for merchants with a JD 68 million capital, exhibition grounds and open storage facilities, in addition to car parks, auto show facilities, offices and other related services. The FZC has recently built 10 large warehouses taking up a total area of 4,000 square metres to help importers store their goods before re-exporting them, said Mr. Arafat. Furthermore, to facilitate transportation and exports, the FZC plans to construct a car park towards other economic sectors. on a 40 dunums.

JD 10,000 in just eleven months. When asked by the Jordan Times whether at such a price the land could be a viable agricultural site, Zeid Abdul Hadi of the Jordan Property Consultants explained that " much of the increased demand seen over the last two years had not come from those wishing to farm the land for profit but from family's wishing to own a second home. In the zoned regions of Amman city, the largest rise have been experienced in the affluent western areas of Abdoun, Sweifieh and Um Utheina and the commercial centres of Gardens Street and Mecca Street.

Mr. Abdul Hadi said, two years ago, a dunum of land on Mecca Street could be purchased for between JD 70,000 to JD 100,000.

the Middle East, property prices are affected by political events, and it is generally accepted that influx of nearly 300,000 expatriates returning from the Gulf states put pressure on the housing market in Amman.

Beyond this, experts disagreed. Mr. Azar believed that much of the inflated demand on the Queen Alia Airport Road was based on speculation that in the future these areas would become zoned, though he stressed that the ministry had no plans to do this.

On the other hand, Mr. Abdul Hadi highlighted the inflow of foreign investment, predominantly in the west of the city.

He also agreed that recent increases in demand for land around Petra and other archaeological sites, reflect a confidence in the future of the tourist industry.

Property prices are notoriously difficult to predict, as most consultants maintain though it seems unlikely that plots will decrease in value in the near future.

Parents of handicapped to be trained

MAFRAQ (Petra) - Chief Chamberlain Prince Ra'd Ben Zeid, the chairman of the Jordanian-Swedish Medical Society, Sunday visited Al Mafraq Governorate House and met with Governor Qaftan Al Majali. Prince Ra'd and Mr. Majali discussed services offered to the handicapped in the governorate and preparations for holding a meeting of Jordanian and Swedish experts, parents of handicapped persons and volunteers in Mafraq in the beginning of September. The meeting will discuss the society's plans to train parents and volunteers on ways of caring for the handicapped and offering them medical services at home. Prince Ra'd said the society's plans to provide these families and volunteers with technical information and train them on how to convey the information to the handicapped individual to reduce the effects of his/her disability in daily activities. Mafraq governorate was selected to carry out the plan first, before being implemented in other parts of the Kingdom later, Prince Ra'd explained.

Minister urges well water sampling

AMMAN (Petra) - Minister of Water and Irrigation Bassam Kakish affirmed the importance of working within an institutionalised framework and as one team in the ministry. During a visit to Al Ramtha Water Department, Mr. Kakish also stressed the importance of digging wells and taking water samples from them to be tested at the ministry's laboratories. The ministry, he said, always tests water samples taken from wells to ensure that they are potable. He announced that a tender to replace the old water pipelines in Ramtha will be offered soon. Mr. Kakish said the ministry will also ministry's standards and specifications. The minister expected that this additional source will help solve the water shortage problem in the Ramtha district.

AMMAN (Petra) - The Customs Department Saturday called on Jordanians who returned from Kuwait and other Arab Gulf countries in the wake of the Gulf crisis to pay the mandatory customs duty due on their cars and vehicles before the expiry of the deadline set by the Cabinet on Aug. 16. Sources at the department said the deadline is final and will not be extended. Failure to pay will result in impoundment of the car for auction.

RSS holds seminar on detergents

AMMAN (Petra) — A five-day training seminar organised by the Royal Scientific Society (RSS) started Saturday. Participants will hear lectures on materials used in the manufacture of detergents, chemicals and physical testing of detergents and will participate in practical applications. The attendees represent the public and private sector industries.

Amman officials review activities

AMMAN (Petra) - A meeting held Saturday at the Amman governorate under the chairmanship of Governor Talaat Al Nawaiseh stressed the importance of expanding the concept of the governorate's Consultative Council by including representatives of voluntary committees. The meeting, attended by directors of the governorate departments, the director of Amman police and the deputy governors, called for setting up popular committees in the capital to act as a link between citizens and officials. Participants in the meeting also underlined the importance of cooperation among all government departments in the upcoming parliamentary elections, scheduled for Nov. 8. They stressed the need for exchanging information between the governorate's various departments and discussed projects being carried out in the governorate this year.

Irbid adds 516 cases to assistance

IRBID (Petra) — The Social Development Department in Irbid has extended recurrent assistance to 516 new cases in Irbid governorate during the first half of 1993, according to Department Director Mahmoud Al Shboul. Mr. Shboul said the increased number of families receiving the aid bring the total to 3,035. Combined they receive JD94,586 monthly. The department, Mr. Shboul said, has during the same period paid emergency aid to 22 cases.

Irbid officers trained in Social Security Law

AMMAN (Petra) — The Social Security Corporation (SSC) Sunday will organise at the Irbid Municipality Building a seminar on the applications of the Social Security Law. The seminar, which will be attended by 150 liaison officers representing various industrial, commercial and agricultural sectors in Irbid, aims to spread awareness of the law among insured citizens and to acquaint the liaison officers with the best means and methods of implementing the law's provisions. The seminar is part of other activities organised by the SSC to increase the number of beneficiaries of the law.

JSCEP to hold 1-day seminar

AMMAN (Petra) — The Jordanian Society for the Control of Environmental Pollution (JSCEP) Monday will hold a seminar on ways of protecting the environment. The day-long seminar, which is being organised in cooperation with the Friedrich Naumann Foundation of Germany, will be conducted at the Vocational Training Centre in Hashemieh near Zarqa. On Tuesday JSCEP will organise a related exhibition, which will display various materials, and a documentary film featuring environmental issues will be shown.

Clarity, decisiveness above all

THE GOVERNMENT continues its refusal to budge on the all-too-crucial issue of the Election Law. Contending that it is working within the limits of the Constitution and the law, the Majali Cabinet appears happy and content just to keep every politician, candidate and voter guessing as to what it intends to do regarding that law. Yesterday, the minister of interior, Salameh Hammad, held a press conference to talk about elections and electioneering, only to refuse to spell out what the government's real intentions are on keeping, changing altogether or just amending the current legislation. The minister confined himself to listing dates, figures, and procedures which, granted, are useful to all of us. But when it came to the most important point of all, that of whether we will hold the next elections according to an old or new legislative formula, he sounded the by-now familiar phrase, that of George Bush: Read my lips.

So far the consensus of the main parties and the majority of ex-deputies have been against any amendment to the law, and understandably so. Those parties have also in fact every right to complain that the dialogue that has been conducted over the issue has not been satisfactory enough. This clearly shows that the government continues to be either indecisive about which course to take or it is decided on changing the law but wants to delay its decision until the last possible moment.

Dr. Majali and his colleagues may have every constitutional right to remain silent or vague, but by doing so they are likely to be accused of contributing little towards the atmosphere of confidence that this country needs in order to press ahead with the

We all know that this government's main purpose is to oversee the elections for the 12th Parliament. His Majesty the King had asked the prime minister to "ensure a smooth election process." Furthermore, the King has said he wanted to see a "public administration (in which) those with qualifications can excel, not one that is paralysed by acts of favouritism and impeded by bureaucracy and fear of shouldering responsibility." It goes without saying, therefore, that an indecisive and reluctant administration will not belp the cause that the King is advocating. What we sincerely hope for and expect is for this government to act fast on an issue that is of vital importance to our democratic march. Clarity, in the end, should be our democracy's name of the game.

ARABIC PRESS COMMENTARIES

AL DUSTOUR daily Saturday cast doubts on statements by U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher in the wake of his tour in the Middle East, noting that the American secretary was reportedly satisfied as he had claimed that the trip was successful and paved the ground for the resumption of Arab-Israeli negotiations. If any progress has been achieved, said the paper, it was at the diplomatic level, but no progress has been achieved on the ground. No real progress can be achieved in the peace negotiations unless it is based on Israel's response to U.N. resolutions and the requirements at a genuine and lasting peace. said the paper. It was noticed however, said the paper, that the secretary's attention was focused in this trip on the Syrian-Israeli and Palestinian-Israeli tracks. But, it added, no real peace can be achieved on any track unless an equal measure of progress is achieved on the other tracks too. Of course the crux of the whole issue lies with the Palestine problem, but still no progress can be achieved at the expense of the other tracks, continued the daily. What the Arabs seek is a full implementation of U.N. resolutions and the restoration of Palestinian people's rights, and indeed if any progress is made it must mean progress towards pulling the Israeli forces out of the occupied Arab territories, demanded the paper. We have not heard anything of this kind yet, neither did we hear Mr. Christopher speak about the rights of the Palestinian people, added the daily. It said that in contrast with the Arab stand Israel is merely seeking compromise solutions that do not provide for its withdrawal from Arab territories.

A COLUMNIST in Al Ra'i daily Saturday demanded that the government insist that Jordan be compensated in full for its continued losses as a result of the U.S. naval blockade on Aqaba. Tareq Masarweh said that acting independently of the United Nations, the United States has been laying a siege on Aqaba causing Jordan to sustain half a billion dollars in economic losses. The Americans have kept Aqaba under siege under the pretext of searching for goods going to Iraq, but they have been allowing shipping to move freely to Turkish ports which, in turn, passes the same goods to Iraq, said the writer. He said that Washington has been doing this to punish Jordan for its non-cooperative stand on the U.S.-led aggression on Iraq and to reward Turkey for its support for and involvement in the Gulf war. The writer said that U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher has mentioned this issue in his press conference, promising that his government would look into the question, but nothing else. Masarweh called on the government to take an adamant stand and strongly demand a halt to such practices on the part of the American naval forces in the Gulf of Aqaba. He said that Jordan should not accept any pressure free any one and Jordanians should not feel humiliated. Sunday's Economic Pulse

By Dr. Fahed Al Fanek

Why a mortgage secondary market?

We in Jordan are very lucky; we do not have to plan for our economy or think for our future. The World Bank is doing the planning and thinking for us. The World Bank's latest creative idea is the establishment of a secondary market for real estate mortgaged debts as part of upgrading Jordan's financial market.

The secondary market aims at creating a market wherein debts covered by mortgages can be traded at prices above or below the nominal value of the debt, i.e., premium or at discount. It is just like the secondary market we already have for shares and bonds, where the owner can sell his shares or bonds whenever he likes, at the going price, which may be below or above the original cost, as the prevailing circumstances may dictate.

The idea sounds good and convincing. A secondary market for mortgages does exist in the United States, where the creditors do not have to wait for the maturity of the installments for 20 or 30 years. They can unload their investments by selling them in the secondary market at the then present value

Equating Jordan with America is not bad, but the circumstances are completely different. The real estate activity in Jordan is limited in comparison with the gigantic economy of the United States. Expansion there is desirable. The secondary market of mortgages is an effective tool to generate liquidity. The real estate financiers can liquidate all or part of their mortgage portfolios and reinvest the cash in fresh mortgages, and so on. Most mortgages in America are organised in favour of new house owners from the

In Jordan, by contrast, the real estate activity is too inflated, perhaps due to lack of alternative investment opportunities. Further expansion in this particular activity is therefore undesirable and counterproductive. The private and public institutions involved in house financing are, by no means, short of cash. They are mainly big banks, corporations and funds, led by the Housing Bank, Housing Corporation Social Security Corporation, and a large number of housing cooperatives.

Jordan suffers no shortages of houses. If anything, a surplus is in the making despite the return of hundreds of thousands of citizens from the Gulf.

Specialised banks, corporations and other funds active in the real estate market and house building and financing need no more incentives. Both the public and private sectors are overeager to build and finance more buildings. When the Housing Bank was criticised for financing non-housing investments, its management responded by asserting that not a single qualified applicant for house financing was ever turned down.

The introduction of a secondary market for mortgages will put an end to special rates in favour of limited-income groups. Any reduced interest rate will inevitably cause a huge capital loss in the secondary market, which no private or public lender would like to

We speculate that the World Bank may have some hidden agenda behind promoting a secondary market for mortgages in Jordan. The call for modernisation of the financial market, and securing a second line of defence for the real estate creditors to fall back to, may not be the only objective. The real objective of the World Bank could be the strengthening of the housing sector and the mobilisation of more resources in its favour. That was the policy of the World Bank during the past 40 years. It may persist during the coming 40 years.

But, according to one conspiracy theory, the final objective is to enhance the housing capacity of Jordan to accomodate all those Palestinians who might eventually be expelled from the West Bank, Gaza Strip, Lebanon, and the Gulf states to form a substitute homeland here. That option is being rejected by words. but no-one can take for granted that it might not be implemented in stages like those we have passed through.

If the Serbs defy Clinton in Sarajevo

By Jim Hoagland

WASHINGTON - Now? You want to bomb the Serbs now, just as they are about to win the war? That was the question I put to a senior government official the other day, to express my confusion over the Clinton administration's tardy decision to get serious about military intervention in Bosnia after months of agonising and reversals. I had concluded weeks ago that the once feasible option of limited air strikes against the Serbs had been overtaken by events. Doing it now risked doing the right thing for the wrong reasons at the wrong time. But the Clintonites never cease to surprise. Here is an approximation of the conversation that followed:

Me: Why now? When the Serbs have defeated the Muslimled Bosnian government and after the administration pushed the Muslims into formally accepting partition and defeat at Geneva? Senior Government Official:

We have to make sure that Sarajevo stands. Without Sarajevo, there can be not even a rump Bosnian state. And the Serbs have to get the message that they cannot move on to Kosovo or Macedonia. There may be only one way to accomplish these goals.

Q: But bombing the Serbs now to keep them out of Sarajevo will not change the strategic situation or alter the Serbian conquests that the partition plan legitimises. It is as if the crisis has shrunk to a size that the Clinton administration can now handle.

A: You are not wrong to put it

This is the final paradox of the Bosnian tragedy. It is urgent enough, and small enough, for the Clinton administration to be ready to intervene. Blocked by America's NATO allies and his own generals from ted 20,000-plus American solusing force before, Bill Clinton diers and other foreign forces to has had to wait until the Bosnian crisis shrank to a manageable dimension to find ways to influence it to a size that fits the limited military resources that the U.S. administration could devote

Behind the smoke hanging over this capital for months there is suddenly some fire. The military tasks that President Clinton and Defence Secretary Les Aspin have proposed to General Colin Powell and the Joint Chiefs of Staff are limited enough that General Powell will at last seriously consider them. The slippery slope that he and his commanders feared five months ago looks more like a muddy ditch that can be forded without great risk to American soldiers.

Partitioning Bosnia into Muslim, Serbian and Croatian ministates buries the more ambitious United Nations Vance-Owen plan, which would have commitpolicing a 10-district multiethnic Bosnian state. That was the Pentagon's worst nightmare.

The partition agreement thus makes U.S. air strikes against the Serbs more likely, not less likely, the bloody Serbian assault on Sarajevo continues anyway. The Pentagon seems less afraid of Mr. Clinton leading the United States into a Balkan quagmire by trying to use force to reverse Serbian territorial conquests.

But the partition accord imposes a strong moral imperative on the Clinton administration as well. It was under heavy but unacknowledged American pressure that the Bosnian government headed by President Alija Izetbegovic agreed in Geneva to a three-state partition that leaves the Muslim population occupying a rump state centred on Sarajevo.

Mr. Izetbegovic came to Geneva defending the multiethnic Bosmian state that declared its independence last year. But he caved after being told by the United States that the alternative to accepting an immediate negoti-ated partition was the imminent overrunning and division of Bosnia by Croatian and Serbian forces. Air strikes would not signal "that the calvary is coming,"

Mr. Izetbegovic was told. How effectively America can use limited force in this chaotic situation is very unclear, even for intelligence experts. "It's a razor-edge call," said one. The Bosnian defeat and the partition agreement ratify the emergence of Slobodan Milosevic's Serbia as an important regional power in the Bal-kans. Mr. Clinton's earlier plan to combine air strikes and a lifting of the arms embargo against Bos-nia horrified European allies, who feared that these steps would be insufficient to prevent Serbian victory but damaging enough to leave Europe dealing with an angry and vengeful Serbia far into America's task now is to minimise the consequences of the defeat that it has encouraged the Bosnian Muslims to accept. Bombing the winners of a war is not an obvious strategy. But if the Serbs defy Mr. Clinton in Sarajevo, the president would have no honourable alternative to carrying out, at long last, his threat.

It would be folly at this point to use military action for other purposes, such as obscuring the devastating political failure that the Bosnian defeat represents for the international community, or to ease guilty consciences. There is no reason to suspect that such motives are at play in the decision to prepare air strikes now. Washington and its allies must ensure that it remains the case as they pursue this belated intervention - The Washington Post.

Regrettable challenge

I wish to respond to the letter in the Jordan Times, August 5-6,-1993, written by Ret. Col. Nasser Mirza in which he refers to me, by name, and my letter of July 29-30, 1993.

I feel certain that Col. Mirza has never been inside the women's toilets at the King Hussein Bridge, at the Jordanian border post at Ramtha, nor at the Queen Alia International Airport. If, however, he has been in the men's toilets at these places and found them clean, functioning and supplied with paper, then I apologise and stand corrected. I will thereby qualify my criticism of those accountable for the maintenance of these public toilets. I fault them for doing only half their job.

The editor of the Jordan Times is responsible for and capable of defending the appropriateness of the letters he publishes. I am: grateful that he chose to print mine and hope that in so doing, this sad situation can be addressed and corrected. I stand by my comments and my right to express them. Controversy, criticism and dissent are integral parts of freedom of speech. This freedom cannot survive if its exercise is limited to a select few or if the speaker is forced to confine his remarks to predetermined topics. It is regrettable if some readers of the Jordan Times found my letter disagreeable. It is tragic if they or others challenge my privilege to write it and the Jordan Times' right to print it.

Ann Sawalha,

Constructive criticism

To the Editor:

I was surprised to read Ret. Col. Nasser Mirza's letter in Thursday's Jordan Times, replying to a previous letter from Ann Sawalha concerning toilet facilities in the country.

It is obvious that Col. Mirza did not understand the point Mrs. Sawalha was trying to make. Evidently he does not know Mrs.

Only by improvement and self-criticism can Jordan grow and by making a comment on a certain subject, Mrs. Sawalha was not attacking Jordan but was trying to make a valid point. As we all know, tourism is very important and the facilities provided to travellers reflect on the country. There ought to be a basic standard of cleanliness for health, hygiene and comfort. We would not question Col. Mirza's loyalty and feelings for his country, but surely the subject under debate is very basic and it is not one to question a person's feelings and loyalty to their

France's new immigration laws

By Sabine Guez

PARIS - For 20 years, a common goal of all French governments has been curbing immigration, but none has made it such a priority as the conservative government of Edouard Balladur. A radical change in French im-migration policies was high on the joint electoral platform of the Rassemblement pour la Républi-que (RPR), the Gaullist party headed by Jacques Chirac, and the Union pour la Démocracie Française (UDF), the right-ofcentre family of former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, Following the Socialists' defeat in last March elections, the overwhelmingly right-wing majority in parliament and its governmental body have delivered on their

On the basis of the conclusions of the Marceau Long commission — an independent think tank on nationality created in 1987 three new sets of immigration laws have been approved. First, access to French citizenship has been restricted. Among its provisions, children of foreign parems who are born and raised in France must submit a formal request for citizenship at age 16. Second, with the aim of clamping down on illegal aliens, police are empowered to carry out random identity checks. Third, restrictions have been placed on foreigners wishing to enter France as either immigrants or political re-

François Dubet, a renowned French sociologist and researcher at the Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique, has published several books on young people born of immigrants and their lives in areas with large immigrant populations. In an exclusive interview, he reflects on the scope of the immigration policy change, its ideological basis and potential social repercus-

"First of all, the French republic does not have a tradition of curbing immigration," Mr. Dubet explained. "There have been times when boundaries were opened and times when they were closed. They were opened at the end of the last century, when France was becoming industrialised and building its military power. They were closed in the 1920s and 1930s, which were marked by restrictive immigration measures.
In the 1950s and 1960s they were opened because of economic prosperity and the need for a bigger workforce."

Mr. Dubet points out that the new laws serve different functions. "Restrictions on entering the country are aimed at fighting egal immigration and stem the economic crisis, high unemployment and political intolerance towards immigrants." Illegal immigration depends largely on an existing illegal labour market. He wonders why there are not more severe penalties for employing illegal aliens and finds it shocking to be tough on the hungry and miserable immigrant and much more lenient on his employer, who, in most cases, voted for the RPR which - with other right-of-centre parties has formed the parliamentary majority since last March elec-

Mr. Dubet is convinced that suppressing illegal labour would be a far more efficient way of limiting illegal immigration, "It would make it very difficult for farmers who employ illegal workhers during the summer seaons; yet, these same farmers voted for the present government." In fact, he says, the same people who employ illegal immigrants are the ones asking for curbs on immigra-

Immigrants will have to make a formal request for French citizenship. "I think everything will depend on how the provi-sions are applied," Mr. Dubet said. "If someone really wants French nationality and requests it properly - and this request is dealt with in a positive manner by the French authorities - I think the process can be constructive. If the person requesting French citizenship finds authorities uncooperative and unpleasant, the process could be negative. It deends on how the interaction takes place." The process proposed by the Marceau Long Commission in 1987 was not intended to close boundaries but to open them in a more regulated manner. "In the current political climate, the opposite may occur," Mr. Duber said. "The previous law that automatically conferred French citizenship resulted in many people — especially the young — being in an improbable situation. They did not ask for French citizenship and do not know whether or not they had it." What troubles me most in these new provisions is the random identity checks," Mr. Dubet said. "It is possible that many foreign-looking people — even those who have lived here for generations like the Algerians, Asians and North Africans could be constantly intimidated by police questioning. The police sometimes overstep their powers spect, which could lead to humiliation.'

Mr. Dubet says that while some illegal immigrants will be identified, there is a risk of polarising those who are legally French or wish to become so. "This provision in the law has not been accompanied by measures aimed at increasing ethnic variety within the police force. Unlike the U.S., France does not have compulsory racial quotas. This law could make life unbearable for people who do not physically look French. I am convinced that the police will make mistakes when questioning people and that many who are becoming integrated into French society will feel more isolated. This provision was adopted to please Le Pen and the National Front electorate."

There is a risk of creating false hope by using slogans such as "zero immigration," as Interior Minister Charles Pasqua has done, "We will never be able to stop illegal immigration entirely and send hundreds of thousands of people back to countries that cannot accommodate them," Mr. Dubet said. "The provisions could have a positive effect on future illegal immigration because they may deter people who might have considered entering France illegally. Borders will still be crossable, and illegal aliens will still find illegal jobs. These measures will have a superficial result, but I doubt their effective-

Rather than facilitating integration, the laws are making it more difficult. "We are saying, 'I will fight against illegal aliens to better integrate immigrants already living here,' but in suspecting everyone who does not look French of being illegal, we are making integration more difficult. We should not delude ourselves. North African teenagers, for instance, will no longer be able to go for a walk without having to show the police their identity papers. Some analysts say we aren't far from asking people to wear a yellow star."

"It is possible that many foreignlooking people even those who have lived here for generations — could be constantly intimidated by police questioning."

Mr. Dubet says France is going too far. "In people's daily lives, potential police brutality during random checks, suspicion a priori, the uncooperative attitude of state employees - these elements lead to the fact that we are currently institutionalising discri-mination." He believes France should not fall into a kind of anti-racist phobia, but it makes him uncomfortable that the government didn't consider some of the consequences of these laws.

"For the past 20 years, there has been no real political shift on the issue," Mr. Dubet said. "A country caught in fast-growing unemployment cannot continue to welcome immigrants without running into difficulties. In that respect - and in the light of what sociologist Max Weber called the 'ethics of responsibility,' that there should be continual examination of the practical effects of any decision — I believe that immigration should be controlled, especially given the imba-lance between the Southern and Northern hemispheres. With 3.5 million people unemployed, it would be absurd to say that France should remain an open

Mr. Dubet says these laws are, to a large extent, political decisions aimed at answering a public upset by continued, unchecked immigration and sensitive to National Front themes. "Charles Pasqua has announced the aim of coming closer to those themes while avoiding embracing the National Front electorate. He is not a fascist. Two events support him: opinion poils show that Pasqua's measures are popular and all the amendments proposed by rank-and-file conservative deputies - who embody public opinion — were repressive. These are important measures." Mr. Dubet says they symbolically comfort a public overwhelmingly hostile to immigration, while physically endangering the lives of many foreigners or French people of foreign descent. He believes the effects could be disastrous perhaps resulting in "ghettoising" part of the population. Deputy Alain Marsaud, a leading proponent of the random checks provision, says it boils when questioning people and do not treat them with proper resocieties" — a "multi-ethnic France" and a "protected France." This is a faise debate, Mr. Dubet says, because France is already a multi-ethnic society. "What is happening today is that France is completely open economically — and this fuels strong feelings of fear among the French. To rectify the situation, images of a culturally and ethnically homogenised France are being brandished." He says this is not new - Mr. Reagan, Mr. Bush and Mrs. Thatcher combined economic liberalism and cultural conservatism.

If a young man who was born in France of foreign parents serves over six months in jail, he will now be denied access to French citizenship. This poses a problem, says Mr. Dubet, who wonders if over-repression of delinquency among children of immigrants is acceptable from a moral and legal standpoint, "If you are not yet a French citizen and commit a crime, you will be sentenced twice - to jail and to losing the opportunity of citizenship - a 'double sentence.' Everything depends on the mindset of both immigrants and authorities." He fears this measure will be implemented in the most restrictive, negative manner, as in the case of random identity checks. Mr. Dubet says the new laws may be used as another obstacle to French citizenship. "The other day I was in a Paris City Hall. Employees were sharply un-pleasant towards people of foreign origin. One employee told me, 'We were given the order to be unpleasant'. High-ranking officials regularly connect immigration with illegal immigration, crime and unemployment. Illegal aliens have illegal jobs and are, thus, offenders. Immigrants are usually poor, are constantly watched by the police and have lost their cultural identity. "Even if immigrants made up 10 per cent of the total population and 30 per cent of the delinquent population," Mr. Dubet said, "it means that 95 per cent of the French population of foreign descent are not criminals. This is all about syllogisms and fantasies. These fantasies belong to a very old — and not only French - tradition that stigmatises others and makes them feel guilty. Of the two - Simone Veil, the Social Affairs Minister who embodies centrist politics and social liberalism within the government, and Charles Pasqua, who upholds repressive measures Pasqua wili emerge victo-

Mr. Dubet says young North-Africans living in the suburbs are "There have not been many reactions so far. I believe some young people feel that the changes regarding citizenship are not necessarily a bad thing, because it will mean they are obliged to choose their nationality. In the case of Algerians, it is a big thing to choose French citizenship because it means choosing the nationality of the winner of the French-Algerian conflict - the enemy. But one cannot live in the

Every year people anticipate riots in the hot summer months in areas with large immigrant populations. Whether the new legislation will increase tensions between young foreigners and the authorities is unpredictable. "For a riot to start there has to be a combination of ingredients, such as an event that triggers it and a certain climate," Mr. Dubet said. "I think the situation in the suburbs is deteriorating fast. We are creating a dual society. Incidents will tend to multiply dramatically. As to whether we should prepare for a riot this summer, nobody

Mr. Dubet believes there is a risk of "ghettoisation" of part of the immigrant population especially if France finds itself some day having to deal with a problem like the black American problem. "If we do not manage to 'integrate' our immigrants or implement a policy of generosity and support that demonstrates the will to integrate them today for future generations, we will be in a situation comparable to that of the U.S. — one of two separate societies."

The disproportionate impact of unemployment on the immigrant population, the break-up of the traditional family and increasing social and ethnic tensions do not bode well for the future. "But," Mr. Dubet said, "we have to admit that immigration has become the scapegoat for French political problems. In essence, immigrants are the ones on whose back a policy is being decided because something has to be

What options are left? "I believe measures aimed at integrating immigrants so they are accepted as they are, measures for compensation and maybe even quota policies should be devised," Mr. Dubet said. "Illegal immigration must be firmly fought, but repression of illegal aliens has become a Trojan horse for excluding immigrants" World News Link.

Old cars tell Laos' history

By Sheri Prasso Agence France Presse

VIENTIANE - If the old cars still driving the streets of Vientiane could speak, what a story they would tell.

Like colourful history books on wheels, the old cars — first French, then Japanese, Amercan, Russian and now again Sapanese - tell Laos' story of colonial domination, war-time occupation and the cold war batties that have been played out here over the last five decades. To see them in nearly mint condition, never having left the radius of the tiny capital of 260,000, nor ever having braved a winter, is to hear their stories of the past.

The greying Citroens and 2CV. the grandfathers of them all. would remember in hoarse French their 1940's heydays, when France's civil servants drove them proudly along the grand boulevards. The American cars - from rock-n-roll era Chevy's to '70s Yank tanks and an astounding number of military jeeps — would recall in a chattering of voices the years when the U.S. embassy here, directing the failed effort to stem the communist tide in Vietnam, was among the largest in the world.

The decades-old Mercedes their rounded behinds pinched into tailfins, would sound like newly released political prisoners venturing out timorously after being hidden away for years - as symbols of ostentation — during the last 15 years of austere communist rule.

The box-like black Volgas and Ladas that replaced them would complain in thick Russian accents about how hard it is to get spare parts these days. And the new kids on the block, the spanking new Toyota pickups, loudly would boast about which one is fastest and which has the biggest cylinders. Even the few new Mercedes 401s and the one black and gold Porsche imported this year have something to say: prosperity and liberalisation are returning to Laos after years of isolation,

A blend of tradi-Theatre-in-Education Programme has produced a variety of drama works addressing both local and foreign young audiences. This year, the programme is planning to step up its national and international share of drama production with a choreo presentation featuring traditional, national as well as universal themes. Entitled "Crescent Night," this Arabic/English presentation is to be performed at the Royal Cultural Centre during August 24-28 before being featured at the next International Children's Festival at Wolf Trap Farm for the Performing Arts in Vienna, Virginia during September 4-6.

"The concept of this choreo presentation is to portray certain aspects of ancient and modern Jordan such as culture, arts, heritage, democracy and development throughout the various activities of our produc-tion," said Lina Tell, director of the show.

Themes tackled by the choreo presentation include highlighting Jordanian nature with its distinct seasons and colourful landscape, Jordanians' attachment to their land, families and communities, Jordan's democracy and liberal-ism, as well as the Kingdom's contributions to the alleviations of the adverse effects of war and famine on children of the world. In this context, children are not portrayed as submitting to big conflicts, but rather as bravely standing up to the challenges spawned by those conflicts.

'Our show will conclude with a song of hope, peace, love and freedom in both Arabic and English, dedicated to the children of the festival," said Mrs. Tell who also heads the NHF Theatre-in-Education Programme.

The show opens with the harvest season in a rural Jordanian setting. Men and women, dressed in traditional clothing, harvest grain crops while singing pastoral lyrics in harmony with nature. A faint flow of music, coupled with bird singing and horse neighing enriches the spirit of the harvest

The festive activities of the harvest season continue on stage for a while before both setting and mood fade into yet a more festive occasion: the Eid. Calls glorifying God Allmighty, emanating from mosque minarets, marking the beginning of the tion and naturalism are clearly noticeable in the movements of happy young people clothed in colourful dresses and immersed in wave-after-wave of fun. Traditional children sweets, games, toys, songs and Eid festivities are featured in the show. The seemingly endless cycle of delight continues unabated for a while, to be broken by the noise of a manual coffee grinder, followed by dimming light. In the heart of darkness and deafening noise, children began to leave the stage; only one young man "Amer" (the Hakawati) stays behind spotlighted to narrate the story of children of the world to audiences. 'Once upon a time, there was a drop of dew... born of light... It was very dark and cold. But the drop of dew was anxiously wait-ing for the light. It was like a sky in the night, decorated and embroidered with stars."

Young performers, at that point, come on stage again to perform a "Sarkha" dance, followed by up-and-down motions signifying persistence, optimism and pride. An air of determination and resolve is dominant. reinforced by a nostalgia-charged song for the noble cause of peace.

ances on several stages plus hands-on workshops in the creative arts. Based on the concept of sharing cultural traditions through the international lan-guage of the arts, the festival is expected to entertain, educate and enrich about 35,000 participants this summer.

Participating teams come from Jordan, Botswana, Cote D'Ivoir, Egypt, Ghana, Iran, Jordan, Kenya, Morocco, Nigeria, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, South Africa, Swaziland, Tanzania, Uganda and Zimbabwe. The presentation is being prepared under the supervision of the Noor Al Hussein Foundation's Theatre-in-Education Programme. Contributors to this work include Rania Qamhawi (choreographer), Kifah Fakhouri (music supervisor), Sakher Hattar (music conductor), Bushra Hajo Tarifi (costumes and accessories), Lina Tell (director) and Najeh Abu-Zein (assistant director). Script was jointly written by Lina Tell, Rania Qamhawi and Najeh Abu-Zein.

Will bloodshed in Lebanon stir revenge?

By Nicolas B. Tatro The Associated Press

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM -Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's military gamble in Lebanon has been hailed as a success at home, shoring up his image and streng-thening his hand to make concessions in Mideast peace talks.

But the legacy of hatred created by "operation accountability" could rebound on Israel if returning Lebanese Shiites seek revenge for the 147 people killed, the 496 wounded and the countless homes lost.

Despite the bloodshed and suf-fering, new horizons of dialogue were seen for Israel with Syria and Lebanon and there appeared to be new attention, if not momentum, that could help the peace talks.

"Rabin has always been prepared to give up the Golan for peace. He only needed a way to sell the deal to the population of Israel."

heavy losses."

Having shown off Israel's pow-er, Mr. Rabin might now be more willing to make concessions to the Syrians who seek the return of the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights, Dr. Maoz said.

Commentator Philip Gillon said Israel's operation was aimed at pinning responsibility for future actions of the Iran-backed Hizbollah guerrillas on someone · Syria, Lebanon, Iran.

"According to the ceasefire, Syria accepted responsibility for Hizbollah. Admittedly, although it was not spelled out in the agreement, there will be a price for Israel to pay — the Golan Heights," he wrote in the weekly newsletter The Hornet.

"But Rabin has always been prepared to give up the Golan for peace. He only needed a way to sell the deal to the population of Mark Heller of Tel Aviv University's Jaffee Centre for Strategic Studies said Israel might be more flexible about withdrawing from its self-declared security zone in South Lebanon if Hizbollah guerrillas were kept in check. "If as a result of the operation, the credibility of the Lebanese government and the Syrians is enhanced and they can prove they can control problems on their side, it may lead to some progress on the security zone."

he said.

Israel's tactics, however, appeared to be overkill to some critics and counterproductive to others. Instead of singling out Hizbollah bases in Lebanon, Israel used its cannons and warplanes to drive hundreds of thousands of refugees out of towns and villages in South Leba-

"Causing the exodus of so many Lebanese is immoral and stupid. It shows insensitivity and gives Israel a bad name," said Mr. Maoz.

Worse, it may produce new guerrillas for Hizbollah's ranks from among the victims who lost relatives and homes. Such was the result of Israel's 1982-5 occupation.

Israel succeeded in uprooting the PLO from Lebanon and removing its potential of attacking the northern border. But its tough actions angered South Lebanon's predominantly Shiite Muslim population — a potential ally which had opposed the Palestinian guerrillas' control of

Clinton hails budget victory as foundation of renewal

dent Bill Clinton, elated by the passage through Congress of a U.S. federal budget designed to heal economic ills, told Americans they had again seized control of their economic destiny.

After a day of nail-biting uncertainty, the Senate Friday night passed into law a plan containing $255 billion in spending cuts and $241 billion in new taxes and other revenues that Republicans and some Democrats had bitterly contested. Democrats say it will cut the federal deficit by $496 billion over five years.

After 12 long years (of Republican rule) we can say to the American people tonight we have laid the foundation for the renewal of the American dream," an elated Clinton told a White House ceremony after the final vote. "After a long season of denial and drift and decline, we are seizing control of our economic destiny.

Vice President Al Gore, who presides over the Senate, cast the vote that broke a 50-50 tie and sent the budget to Mr. Clinton for his signature.

The outcome had been uncertain less than an hour before the vote, but Senator Bob Kerrey, a Nebraska Democrat who had agonised over the issue, nnounced: "I could not and should not cast the vote that brings down your presidency."

billion. Tax increases and limits on tax

- An increase in the personal tax rate to 36 per cent from 31 per cent for individuals whose taxable income is above $115,000 a year and couples above $140,000. The rate will rise to 39 per cent for income above $250,000. The new rates, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1993, combined with other taxes on personal income will raise $115

- A 4.3 cent-per-gallon increase in the tax on transport fuels, including a jump in the petrol tax from 14.1 cents to 18.4 cents per gallon. Commercial jet fuel will be exempted from the increase for two years. The tax will raise $24.2 billion.

— A tax to pay for medicare on all wages. Until now, wages above $135,000 have been exempt. The new tax will raise $29

Trucks rolling again in India

NEW DELHI (AFP) - Trucks were back on the roads across India Saturday after cargo haul-ers called off a nationwide strike which halted the movement of food and freight across state borders for nearly a week. Fruit and vegetables, dairy products and manufactured goods were being delivered once again throughout India's 25 states Saturday, state-run radio said. The powerful All India Motor Transport Congress (AIMTC) ordered truckers back to work after Transport Minister Jagdish Tytler vowed to abolish interstate tolls and highway levies. The various state tolls and appoint markets by trying to keep their interest rates high. This could "put a large pin in the balloon," he added. taxes add-more than $725 million a year to state coffers, but truck drivers say the practice breeds corruption, causes delays and increases transportation costs.

Fruit and vegetable prices soared in a number of Indian states after the 1.8 million truckers warned they would be forced to lay off workers because of a scarcity of raw materials.

The AIMTC had called a strike in July of last year to demand the lifting of the state tolls and taxes, but went back to work following government assurances that the matter would be resolved soon. "It did not happen and this time we wanted a formal declaration," said AIMTC Secretary General Chittranjan Dass. The national union said the ban on inter-state traffic had been to write off big part of debt WASHINGTON (R) - Russia to Western and other govern-

countries and international banks to write off a big chunk of the nearly $80 billion in debt it owes them, a senior Russian official said Friday.

The surprise request, which Russia has yet to make formally, could run into opposition from some Western nations already providing billions of dollars in aid to Moscow.

"We want a large debt reduction from our creditors," Konstantin Kagalovsky, Russia's representative at the International Monetary Fund (IMF), told Reuters in an interview.

He said that Russia does not have the means to pay off all the debts and will be forced into an eventual default if its debt burden is not reduced.

This is money that was given to the former Soviet Union - the evil empire, as it was called at that time in the United States. The communists used it to prolong their rule. Now it's a burden for democratic Russia." The huge debts threaten to undermine Russia's efforts to reform its economy, sapping the country of much-needed finance as it struggles to free itself from pleted negotiations with its international bank creditors on a debt rescheduling agreement covering 1992 and 1993 payment:

But that pact — like a similar plans to ask major industrial ments. Germany is the biggest creditor and thus would suffer the most from any write-off.

There is a precedent for Rus sia's request for debt reduction. The United States and other Western governments in the so-called Paris Club have agreed to forgive half of Poland's debts, although the country has yet to secure a similar deal from its international bank creditors.

Russia, though, is a far ticher country than Poland, with resources of oil, gold and diamonds, and thus might face resistance from creditors to a request for debt forgiveness:

Mr. Kagalovsky played down the importance of those resources, and instead stressed the massive problems that Russia faces after decades of communist rule — from a potential "ecological catastrophe" to a distorted economic structure.

"There is a myth that Russia is Mr. Kagalovsky said. "This a country with great resources," money was completely wasted. he said. "Unfortunately, that myth has nothing to do with reality.

The Russian official declined to say how much of a debt reduction Russia would be seeking, although he did note that Poland had obtained a 50 per cent cut in its debts.

Mr. Kagalovsky said that IMF projections paint a stark picture of the situation that Russia will find itself in coming years as its foreign debts mount and payments increase.

According to the IMF, Russia's foreign debt is likely to climb to $91.7 billion at the end of this years and to $122.7 billion by the end of 1999. Its annual debt service bill will rise to $39 billion in 1999 from $20.5 billion this

Gulf states to ask EC to identify exports

ABU DHABI (AFP) — Guif Arab states plan to ask the European Community (EC) to identify the origin of all its exports to them, a move trade sources said appeared aimed at preventing Israel from circumventing the Arab boycon.

Authorities in the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) received complaints some products im-ported from the EC, the GCC's main trade partner, do not carry the name of the producing country, local newspapers reported Friday.

They said the Riyadh-based GCC secretariat had sent letters on the issue to the trade authorities and chambers of commerce and industry in member states ---Sandi Arabia, Kuwait, Oman, Bahrain, Qatar and the United Arab Emirares.

imported products from the EC must carry the name of the factory and the producing country as the GCC does," the letter said. "The secretariat will soon contact the EC to ask it to comply with such decisions after some products carried only the label 'Made in Europe'.'

Gulf trade sources said the move was apparently aimed at preventing Israel from breaking a collective Arab economic boycott as it could have shareholdings in the company which exports to the

Uzbekistan, Kazakhstan join new rouble zone

MOSCOW (R) — The Central Asian state of Uzbekistan and neighbouring Kazakhstan formally joined a new rouble zone Saturday, saying they want to be members of a joint monetary system with Russia, Interfax News Agency said.

Interfax said the presidents of Russia, Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan signed a joint statement after intensive discussion of the situation that is emerged since Russia effectively introduced its own national currency last month,

The statement said Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan, whose economies are closely intertwined with Russia's, "have decided to set up a joint monetary system with the Russian Federation using the rouble, the currnecy of Russia". The document also gave the heads of governments and central anks of the three states two weeks to finalise the scheme.

Late last month Russia's central bank announced it was withdraw ng all pre-1993 roubles from circulation and the 1993 banknotes ecame the country's only currency. The move forced other ex-Soviet republics, which were still using the rouble, to decide whether to introduce their own currencies mmediately or join Russia. Russian officials have made clear that those joining Russia will to a pertain extent lose their sovereignty, as their central banks would become effective branches of the Russian central bank.

Future looks bright for Gulf steel industry 600,000 tonnes.

energy and high liquidity will turn the Gulf into a major steelproducer although it is among the poorest regions in reserves of iron ore, according to an official industrial group.

The six Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) states currently produce around 2.4 million tonnes of steel per year and new plants and expansion projects will push the figure to nearly four million tonnes per year.

"GCC states are expected to become major producers of steel and related material in the next period," the Doha-based Gulf Organisation for Industrial Consultancy (GOIC) said in a study. "The steel industry is considered one of the basic industries that constitute the backbone of the light, industrial sector in the region because it is closely associ-ated with several other indus-

GOIC, which advises on government industrial policies in the region, put Saudi Arabia's steel production at around 1.8 million

It said expansion would push the kingdom's production to about 2.3 million tonnes and Qatar's to 1.2 million tonnes. A new steel plant in Qatar, to cost around $329 million, will have an output capacity of 500,000 ton-

The United Arab Emirates (UAE) also plans to build a $400 million plant with a capacity of 600,000 tonnes per year. The other GCC members — Bahrain, Kuwait and Oman - do not have a steel industry.

The industry was launched in the 1970s when GCC nations embarked on a massive drive to build the infrastructure with the help of oil wealth. The projects helped the region slash steel imports to nearly 300,000 tonnes a year from more than 3.5 million tonnes in 1983, mostly from Turkey.

The new steel projects in the region and expansion of existing plants were prompted by a surge in domestic demand due to an upturn in the construction sector. A recent report by the UAE contractors' association said the construction sector in the GCC peaked at $30 billion in 1992. The upswing is expected to continue as more funds return from abroad for investment. 'Construction remains one of the most profitable sectors in the Gulf given the high rents," said Mohammad Kaswani, a leading UAE stockbroker. "Its return exceeds 10 per cent, compared with less than six per cent from bank deposits." Apart from steel, GCC states have also become major producers of aluminium and cement as industrial sector in a bid to reduce reliance on oil as their main

Such industries have prospered as they require intensive use of energy and the region is among the richest in oil and gas, sitting on more than 40 per cent of the world's crude and 17 per cent of the world's gas.

Iron reserves in the Gulf are negligible, with only a few thousand tonnes in Saudi Arabia and Oman. The region imports iron from Australia and Europe.

"After a decline in demand for steel in the GCC between 1983 and 1990, it is expected to pick up in the 1990s after the region overcame the relative recession they pump more funds into the and managed to adapt to new economic developments," GOIC said.

Jerusalem/Intermarkets Advertising wins Philadelphia Bank account

Jerusalem/Intermarkets Advertising recently signed an agreement with the newly-founded Philadelphia Bank accrediting it as the bank's advertising agent. The Philadelphia Bank was born on March 17, 1993, as a result of a merger between the Jordanian Financing House and DARCO

Company, with a capital of JD10 million. The last acquisition is yet another achievement for the Intermarkets Advertising network and in particular for the Amman office which, since the beginning of the year, has acquired several new accounts adding to its already impressive portfolio.

Queen Elizabeth opens

palace to public By Jill Serjeant

Reuter LONDON -- Queen Elizabeth II opened Buckingham Palace to the paying public on Satur-day, but only half the expected number of sightseers turned up for a first-hand glimpse of the riches of her London home.

A handful of visitors camped out for days in nearby St. James' Park and enjoyed the privilege of being among the first to walk through splendid rooms furnished with red plush and gilt and diamond chande-

Behind them, however, long queues expected failed to materialise, despite sunny weather and advance publicity that would be the envy of most of the world's tourist attrac-

Palace officials said 4,314 visitors were admitted on the first day out of an estimated daily capacity of 8,000.

"I think everyone is very satisfied and no major changes to the operation are envisaged at the moment," a spokesman said. "There has been no great press of people at any time and that has added to people's enjoyment in that it has been much more comfortable and nobody has had to queue for that long." The palace is open for a limited season until October 1. The state suite, used to entertain distinguished foreign guests — just a tiny part of the 600-room palace - is open to the public at an entry price of eight pounds per head to raise money towards the £40 million needed to repair another of the Queen's residences, Windsor Castle, which was badly damaged by fire last year. The world's most famous stately home drew royalists sporting union jack flags, foreign holidaymakers and a few vocal Republicans who stayed outside, waving anti-monarchy placards. Most who visited said they were awed by the 18 richly decorated state rooms, art and

Morocco plans to invest $375m in telecoms

RABAT (R) - Morocco invested the equivalent of $209 million to expand its telecommunications network last year and plans to invest a further $375 million this year, a senior official said Friday.

and to Alcatel of France and Eriksson of Sweden in the north. A senior Bell Canada executive said his group would install 100,000 new lines in the south this year, the same as last year. In its annual report, the ONPT said the number of lines rose from 675,000 in 1991 to 838,000 last year, and phone subscribers rose from 497,000 to 654.000.

Morocco, it said, now had direct dialling facilities with 162 countries compared to 117 in 1991.

He said Serb artillery opened fire on Igman late Friday when Muslim units withdrew to Hrasnica, a Sarajevo suburb at the base of the mountain.

talks in Geneva Monday on setting up a proposed "union" of three ethnic republics.

But the most difficult part of the negotiation is expected to be the drawing up of the new republics' borders.

In a U.N. report to be published Sunday, Bosnia mediators Lord Owen and Thorvald Stol-tenberg say Sarajevo itself presents the toughest problem and warn a temporary solution for the city lasting a year or more might be needed.

"This was the most contentious issue during discussions on the future map, with positions deeply entrenched. The passions aroused are intense," it says of Saraievo.

"Time may be needed for the wounds of the war to heal. Time to restore the damage done to communications and buildings in the Serb, Muslim and Croat areas. Time during which the three republics will learn to live and cooperate together and ...re-discover mutual respect and tolerance," it cautions.

Meanwhile, sporadic fighting continued on several battlefronts in central Bosnia, pitting Muslims against Croats, Muslims against Serbs, Serbs against Croats.
One girl was killed by a sniper's bullet in Mostar and another child was wounded by a sniper in Novi Travnik.

Top U.S. and NATO officials sent a strong signal to Bosnia's Serbs to halt their seige of Sarajevo or face swift military action. "We're ready to take the action that needs to be taken," said Secretary of State Warren Christopher. Christopher.

An aide said Mr. Christopher would be "working the phones"

Saturday upon his return to Washington in a continuing campaign to shore up international support for military action.

Mr. Christopher flew to Italy's Aviano Air Force Base Friday for a briefing from NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner, U.S. General John Shalikashvili, the alliance's top military comman-der, and U.S. Admiral Jeremy Boorda, the commander of NATO air operations in Bosnia.

"The military operation is ready," said Mr. Christopher. "I would say to the Serbs they would be very unwise to depend upon any indecision."

Meanwhile, U.S. Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff General Colin Powell Friday warned against intervening in the Bosmian conflict "just out of a sense of frustration.

"The use of military force should always to related to a political objective." Gen. Powell said in an interview with British ITN television.

American troops "are willing and able and fully prepared to execute any mission given to them," he said, adding that he would advocate the use of military force "in a decisive kind of way — overwhelming is not the correct word."

U.S. Muslim, Jewish and Christian leaders Friday urged U.S. President Bill Clinton to move immediately to use all means necessary, including force, to "ensure genocide in Bosnia-Herzegovina is ended forever."

The leaders, members of the American Task Force on Bosnia and representing about a dozen organisations, called a news conference to press their case for a more muscular U.S. response to Serb aggression.

Cabinet abolishes health tax for dead

ROME (AP) — It may offer little consolation, but once again death offers some respite from taxes in Italy. The cabinet has abolished a regulation that said the dead were still responsible for the 85,000 lira ($50) annual health care tax in the year of their death. Health Minister Maria Pia Garavaglia, who issued the order creating the regulation on July 30, conceded there was no way to enforce it. She said she had hoped family members and heirs would pay the tax, which sought to bring in 30 billion lira ($19 million) a year from the deceased.

Store guide for would-be shoplifters deters thieves

STOCKHOLM (R) — The Swedes have found a novel way of discouraging shoplifters—they signpost the potential thicks favourite pickings, a university research team said. Seven shops placed signs saying "these goods attract shoplifters" on self-service racks of goods ranging from leather jackets to chocolates, but the thieves stayed away. The shops in Stockholm, Uppsala and Vasteras reported sharp drops in pilfering, Uppsala University ust Ned Carter told Swedish Radio. "I believe it is because shop staff and customers pay more attention to displays with those signs, deterring potential shoplifters," said Mr. Carter. David Ottosson, a shopkeeper in Uppsala, told the Swedish News Agency (TT) that the signs had cut shoplifting, be he doubted whether they would stop professional thieves. Shoplifting costs several hundred million crowns (tens of millions of dollars) every year in Swedish stores.

Norwegian gays marry after change in law

OSLO (R) - Five Norwegian gay couples married after Norway became the second country in the world to bring in a law permitting the official registration of homosexual partnerships.
"More, more," shouted a crowd of around one thousand people when the five couples who married left the Oslo registrar's of office. NTB news agency said 10 Christians who staged a protest against the ceremony were hardly noticed. Norway refuses to call the ceremony a marriage, but the only difference between a partnership and marriage is that gay couples are not allowed to adopt children. "The judicial and economic regulations are otherwise identical with matrimony. Only Denmark has a similar law," said Vidar Kildahl, spokesman at the Ministry of Children and Family Affairs. Grete Berget, minister of children and family affairs, later met the newly-wed couples, both male and female, at a reception in central Oslo. The ritual itself, which takes place at the Public Registrar's Office, is almost identical with that of marriage. The law came into force on Aug. 1 and one couple, who wanted to avoid publicity, married earlier

New Japanese premier finalises cabinet line-up

TOKYO (Agencies) — New Japanese Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa, promising a cabinet the people want, sat down with his new partners in the ruling coalition Saturday to finalise the government team. Mr. Hosokawa, whose election late Friday ended 38 years of unbroken rule by the scandalmired Liberal Democratic Party (LDP), opened talks with his coalition partners to draw up a list expected to include all the alliance chiefs.

Excluding Mr. Hosokawa, they are the heads of seven parties from LDP splinter groups to the Socialists and including a union organisation. This is the start of coalition rule and I think (each alliance partner) should be represented. Mr. Hosokawa told reporters Saturday, "We're not going to be like the LDP which just doled out posts (like rewards for loyalty)... the suitability and ability of the candidates will be considered carefully.

"My aim now is to create a cabinet that lives up to the expectations of the people. It's not final yet... but the line-up will include capable lawmakers (from my coalition), women and private Mr. Hosokawa said an carly meeting with U.S. President Bill Clinton was at the top of his international agenda. "It could be in September if I'm able to attend the U.N. General Assembly session or in November, when a summit meet-ing (of leaders of the Asia-Pacific region) is scheduled in Seattle," he said as he headed for his first full day at the prime minister's residence. The birth of a new government

- that brings Japan its first genuine leadership change in four decades - was long and anguished. The outgoing LDP, reluctant to hand over power without a struggle, employed delaying tactics to postpone Mr. Hosokawa's election in parliament for almost two days, stalling the formal launch of his government until Monday. Emperor Akihito left in the midst of the turmoil to represent Japan at Saturday's state funeral for Belgium's King Baudouin. He returns Monday to swear in the new cabinet. Mr. Hosokawa's first order of business late Friday was to name Masayoshi Takemura, leader of an LDP splinter party in the coalition and a close ally, to the post of chief cabinet secretary. Former Finance Minister Tsntomu Hata, head of the LDP breakaway Japan Renewal Party (JRP), is widely tipped to become deputy premier and foreign minister. Kozo Watanabe, an extrade minister who also comes from the JRP, is expected to be named finance minister.

"It looks like the JRP is plucking the best posts for itself," political commentator Minoru Morita said on television. "It shows who is really in charge."
While Mr. Hata is the nominal head of the JRP, once the largest and most powerful LDP faction, its real power behind the scenes is Ichiro Ozawa, an ex-LDP secretary general. He is credited with masterminding the creation of a coalition, despite widely disparate views on key policy issues like defence and taxation, and then wooing the popular Hosokawa into the alliance. "The main priority of the new government is to put an end to the scandals that have characterised LDP rule," Mr. Morita said. "But many people are wondering if a scandal figure like Ozawa is serious about changing politics." Mr. Ozawa, whom prosecutors have named as a possible suspect in the latest corruption scandal to rock the LDP, is said not to be seeking a cabinet post for himself, possibly for fear of stirring controversy. On the other hand, he may just be following in the footsteps of past LDP kingmakers, who for years ran the country without holding influential office.

The White House Friday hailed the election of Mr. Hosokawa as Japan's 79th prime minister.

Rare trebles for Gillingham and Plewinski

SHEFFIELD (R) - Nick Gillingham extracted revenge and Catherine Plewinski upstaged teenage prodigy Franziska Van Almsick as Britain and France celebrated rare golden trebles at the European Swimming Championships Friday.

Gillingham slew the demons of defeat with a stirring victory in the 200 metres breaststroke over Hungarian Karoly Guttler. His world record breaking conqueror in the 100 on Tuesday.

Plewinski, a small packet of determination, succeeded where all others had failed and beat the long and lean German Van Almsick in the women's 100 metres butterfly.

Gillingham and Plewinski joined a select band who have won an event at three successive European Championships, including the likes of Vladimir Salnikov, Michael Gross, Adrian Moorhouse and Tamas Darnyi.

Former East German Sylvia Gerasch, world champion at 17 back in 1986, struck another blow for the older swimmer with victory in the women's 100 metres breaststroke eight years after she first won the event.

Graf, Sanchez-Vicario in semifinals

Sampras, Bruguera advance; Ivanisevic eliminated

CARLSBAD, California (Agencies) - World number one Steffi Graf outlasted seventh-seeded Mary Pierce of France 6-3 6-4 in a blistering baseline battle on Friday to move into the semifinals of the $375,000 Mazda Classic.

The top-seeded German will clash with third-seeded Conchita Martinez, a 6-3 6-2 winner over fifth seed Magdalena Maleeva of Bulgaria, Graf holds an 8-0 career mark over the Spaniard. Qualifier Marketa Kochta, another German, advanced to her first major semifinal. The world's 173rd-ranked player beat 17-year-old Elena Likhovtseva of Kazakhstan 6-1 6-2. A second German-Spanish semifinal was set up when second-seeded Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario beat 11th-seeded American Ann Grossman 6-0 6-0 in 61 minutes in the day's last quarterfinal match.

Graf, who won consecutive titles here in 1988 and 1989, has not looked sharp in her two victories in the previous rounds. However, the 24-year-old German felt better about her game in her first-ever meeting with the hard-hitting Pierce.

"It is definitely a big improvement from the other two matches," said Graf, the reigning French Open and Wimbledon champion, of the one hour, 38 minute victory. "I didn't make as many mistakes

Pierce, ranked 14th in the world, displayed a punishing ground game and had eight break opportunities in the opening set but couldn't convert any. Graf said that was the key to the victory. "I played the important points better. When it was important I played very well," she said. Graf wasn't at her best but was still too good for the French player, who committed 35 un-

Pierce said she had fun despite the loss, and agreed that her inability to play the big points hampered her chances.

"I think that's what's missing for me. I'm always having close matches against top players but the big points always seem to make the difference."

Pierce said she had mixed feelings about her first encounter with Graf, "I think it's the match I enjoyed the most," she said. "I was having so much fun. "It's just a great feeling when you play really well against the number one. You have great points, you hit great shots, and that shows me that I have the game to beat the top players.

Manchester United win Charity Shield

LONDON (AFP) - Manchester United, beaten by Arsenal in South Africa recently, exacted their revenge at Wembley Saturday when they beat the FA Cup winners in their English Charity Shield Clash. The champions needed a sudden-deathpenalty shoot-out to triumph in the traditional pre-season curtain-raiser after the sides had drawn 1-1, but they were not complaining after being denied a clear spotkick in the second half, when Arsenal midfielder John Jensen appeared to bring down Paul Ince.

Wales striker Mark Hughes had fired United ahead by volleying in Eric Cantona's cross in the seventh minute, but that goal was cancelled out by a looping 18-yard drive from Arsenal's England forward, Ian Wright.

Wright turned villain, though, in the shoot-out, dragging his penalty wide to tie the first set of spotkicks 4-4 after Arsenal goalkeeper David Seaman had brilliantly saved Denis Irwin's effort. When the shoot-out went to sudden death, former England skipper Bryan Robson netted for United, but Seaman's kick was saved by his opposite number, Danish international Peter Schmeichel.

The fact that the match had ended in penalties left a bad taste

among the 66,519 crowd, many of whom booed when it was announced that a shoot-out would settle an absorbing match

Belgians, world pay homage to King Baudouin

BRUSSELS (R) — Belgium's Queen Fabiola, dressed strikingly all in white, led the funeral homage to her husband Saturday as Belgians put aside bitter linguistic differences in a common expression of grief for King Baudouin.

Tributes read at a funeral mass delicately balanced between the country's two languages ranged from a letter from a former prostitute to an AIDS sufferer's thanks to the king.

The funeral broke with Catholic convention and followed the queen's wish for it to be a "ceremony of glory and hope" for a king who united Dutch and French-speaking communities.

Queen Fabiola had chosen celebratory music and urged mourners not to vear black for the farewell to the man known as "the sad king." She also reduced official mourning to one week after the government had announced it would last until Sept. 7, the birthday of the king.

"There are kings who are more than kings, they are their peoples' shephered. They don't just reign, they love, to the point of giving their own lives — such was King Baudouin," Cardinal Godfried Danneels said at the mass.

Britain's Queen Elizabeth, Emperor Akihito of Japan, and President Francois Mitterrand of France joined the Queen and Belgium's future King Prince Albert in Saint Michel Cathedral.

-A former Antwerp prostitute from the Philippines whom the king helped said in a letter read out for her: "He was standing up for us. He was a real king. I called him my friend. Now we cry again. We lost our friend.'

King Baudouin led a crusade against the sexual trade in women and children and made a highprofile visit to a brothel in the port of Antwerp last year to listen to the prostitutes' own stories.

He died suddenly aged 62 last Saturday. His brother Prince Albert will be sworn in as king on Monday. The queen, flanked by Prince Albert and the king's sister Grand Duchess Josephine-Charlotte of Luxembourg, walked slowly behind the falgdraped coffin drawn on a gun carriage by an armoured car from the royal palace to the cathedral.

Behind her came a phalanx of foreign dignitaries, among them Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko and King Juan Carlos and Queen Sophia of Spain, who had chosen to join the cortege.

The thousands of people lining the route stood in silent tribute, the only sounds the clatter of horses' hooves as 144 lancers of the royal escort went by, the tolling of a church bell and the echo of a 21-oun salute.

During the mass the queen put her arms round the children of Princess Astrid, the daughter of Prince Albert, in a gesture of comfort characteristic of the sincerity and simplicity for which she and her husband were

"Crowds jammed the square in front of the cathedral and old Brussels' historic grand place to follow the mass on loudspeakers and a giant television screen. Many wept openly as Flemish singer Will Tura sang "I miss You Silence fell again as the coffin was carried down the steps to the waiting gun carriage for the final journey to the royal place at Laeken on the outskirts of Brusseis, where the king will be buried in the family crypt.

As Queen Fabiola got into ber car the crowd broke into spontaneous applause. She clasped her hands in a gesture of thanks and placed them on her heart. For a day Belgium set aside the linguistic differences that have brought down most of the 38 governments since World War II in an outpouring of grief for the king who was, in the words of Prime Minister Jean-Luc Dehaene, "A profoundly good The Beigians have forgotten their linguistic problems today, which is a very good thing," said George Schmit, a teacher from the city of Liege who as an army conscript was in the guard of honour at the king's wedding in

Mr. Schmit was among thousands of people who arrived early — some sleeping on the pavement overnight — to be sure of getting a good view as the funeral cortege arrived at the cathedral.

"I have many reasons to be proud of our king. But if he could see us today he would be proud of us." said Xavier Deutsch, who spent the night under a blanket on the pavement.

Some foreign leaders, like Queen Elizabeth and Emperor Akihito, took the unusual step of attending the funeral personally because they counted the king a Their presence caused a security headache and every building around the cathedral square was lined with army and police snipers. Ropes hung down the sides of buildings so that elite troops could intervene in the event of

A police sniffer dog checked the flowers which turned the steps of the cathederal into a multicoloured carpet. Emergency services staff and scouts handed out 15.000 cans of water and 300 large boxes of biscuits to the crowd. Dr. Robert Faniel, who headed up some of the medical teams, said extra staff had been laid on because of the security risk. "We were very afraid of a bomb or something like that. But thankfully this has not happened," he said after the funeral. The mood visibly lifted after the mass as the crowd turned to celebrity spotting when almost 1,000 monarchs, heads-of-state and foreign dignitaries emerged from the cathedral.

Russia tells Iraq — bow to U.N. or forget trade

MOSCOW (R) - Russia said Friday it backed anti-Iraqi sanctions and told Baghdad not to harbour false hopes over recent bilateral talks, which it said were aimed at sorting out Iraqi debts and not fresh business. "The Russian-Iraqi talks in no way mean Russia's departure from the line of the world community regarding Iraq,"

Foreign Ministry spokesman Grigory Karasin told a news briefing.

"The talks were on many unsolved problems, mainly Iraqi debts."

An official delegation led by Russia's deputy minister of foreign economic relations, Oleg Davydov, visited Baghdad this week to discuss the repayment of Iraq's outstanding debts, Russian diplomats told Interfax news agency. The Iraqi News Agency said the two countries signed bilateral trade agreements during the talks. But Mr. Karasin said: "Our firm position is that Iraq should fulfill the U.N. Security council resolutions."

NEW YORK (Agencies) — The federal judge handling the World Trade Centre bombing case says he will summon an unprecedented 5,000 potential jurors for the trial against four of the defendants to start next month.

U.S.District Judge Kevin Duffy also aid Friday he had considered moving the trial out of New York but that he doubted such a move would do any good in finding an impartial jury.

Prosecutors said it will take them eight to 10 weeks to present the government's case against the four defendants accused of carrying out the Feb. 26 bombing at the landmark twin towers. Six people died and more than 1,000 were injured.

Defence lawyers said they have no idea how long it will take them to make their case.

The four scheduled to go on trial are: Mahmud Abouhalima, the alleged ringleder, Moham- The judge also warned lawyers mad Salameh, who allegedly rented the van used in the bombing, Nidal Ayyad, a chemical engineer who authorities say manufactured the bomb, and Ahmad Mohammad Ajaj, who allegedly brought bomb-making manuals into the United States. to be in Iraq.
The seventh suspect, Bilal Alkaisi, is due to be tried separately at a later date although his lawyer says the government's case against Mr. Alkaisi is weak and will never go to trial.

Saying he doubted a jury could be found that knew nothing of the bombing, Mr. Duffy said, "I'm not sure I can find any place within the United States with a population that has no knowledge whatsoever of the incident."

"So I'm leaning mostly in keeping the case here (in New York),

The judge made his remarks as lawyers for the four defendants entered innocent pleas to a new indictment charging them with conspiracy in the bombing. The new indictment also adds immigration charges against three defendants and charges all of them with injuring three Secret Service agents who were in the trade centre garage when the bomb went off. Mr. Duffy has asked potential jurors to report Sept. 14 for a trial

Lebanon's U.S. envoy resigns

CAIRO (R) - the Lebanese ambassador to the United States resigned because Foreign Minister Faris Bouez failed to pass on a report predicting Israel's bom-bardment of South Lebanon, Arab diplomats said Saturday.

They said Ambassador Simon Karam sent a report to the Foreign Ministry at least a week before the air and artillery assault began on July 25 saying he had information that Israel was preparing for action.

Mr. Bouez informed Lebanese President Elias Hrawi, who is his father-in-law, but did not pass the report to Prime Minister Rafik Hariri, who is at odds with Mr.

The diplomats said Mr. Hariri found out about the report after the week-long offensive, which killed 130 people and drove more than 500,000 from their homes, and was furious. A few days warning might have given the government time to launch a diplomatic campaign to prevent the Israeli action. Mr. Hariri lobbied to sack Mr.

Bouez but failed because of the foreign minister's close relations with the president and with Syria, the main power broker in Leba-

Mr. Karam finally resigned in disgust, the diplomats said. Radio Lebanon quoted Mr. Karam as saying on Friday that it had become impossible for him to continue his work in a way that satisfied his conscience and national convictions. Embassy officials in Washington confirmed on Friday that Mr. Karam had resigned.

Rebels, Sudanese officials hold talks

Combined agency dispatches

KHARTOUM - Senior southern Sudan rebel leaders have held first-ever official talks with a government delegation on Sudanese soil, state media reported Saturday.
The state-run daily Al Engaz

Al Watani said a government delegation led by Upper Nile Governor Paul Reth Kwang had met Lam Akol, leader of a faction of the divided Sudan People's Liberation Army (SPLA). The previously unannounced talks, held in Fashoda some 70 kilometres from Malakal, capital of Upper Nile state, were the first between the Islamic-backed military government and southern re-bels to be held within Sudan. State television also reported the meeting, broadcasting pic-tures of Mr. Akol in military fatigues emerging from the Fashoda talks.

Also present at the government-held town were Rek Mashar, Mr. Akol's second in command, Ahmad Al Radi Jabir, chairman of the peace committee of the Transitional National Assembly, and Fadlulsid Abu Gisaisa, director of the state-run Peace and Development Founda-

Mr. Jabir, a member of the government delegation, said the two sides had agreed to set up a 10-member committee, with five representatives from each side, to organise efforts for peace and relief in the Upper Nile area.

The meeting is likely to rekindie the controversy within the

The two sides agreed to work to overcome disagreements that surfaced during talks between rebels and the government in peace talks in the Kenyan capital Nairobi in Mav.

They further agreed to guarantee safety of Nile River barges for delivery of food to the area.

According to the newspaper report, the meeting was hosted by the new chieftain of the Shuluk tribe. Mr. Akol is a Shuluk, one of the Nilotic tribes of southern

News of the talks came as former U.S. President Jimmy Carter arrived in Khartoum to continue his attempts to mediate in the civil war between southern-based rebels and the government. Mr. Carter told reporters he had come to Sudan for talks with both "leaders of the Islamic movement and government officials" to discuss peace efforts and safe delivery of relief to refugees in southern Sudan.

The former U.S. president arrived from Nairobi, where he had talks with Col. Garang's faction of the SPLA.

Jailed Britons not convicted of adultery — UAE lawyer

enced in the Emirate of Sharjah to one year's imprisonment for cohabitation were just sharing a house and were not convicted of adultery, their lawyer said Fri-Hafez Tahboub said Peter Wade, 41, and Yvonne Campbell, 37, both denied adultery in court and were convicted only of living in the same house while Yvonne was still married to another man, Kenneth Campbell. British newspapers have described the woman as Peter's common-law wife and diplomats said she now preferred to be known as Wade rather than Mr. Tahboub said she applied for a divorce from Mr. Campbell earlier this year but was still known as Yvonne Campbell. "Islamic law says that adultery can only be punished if both parties admit to it in front of a judge or if four witnesses saw the two having sexual relations," Mr. Tahboub added.

He told Reuters an appeal against the sentence would be heard in 10 days, Yvonne Campbell and her four children, aged between two months and 10 years old, were released on bail Thursday on condition she stayed nearby pending the appeal, he said. Mr. Tahboub said he expected Peter Wade to be released on bail imminently.

and lived with him," he added. Mr. Tahboub said that when she filed for divorce, Mr. Campbell "went to the police and claimed that she was living with someone else and was pregnant with his (Wade's) baby. He said she had earlier confessed to police that she committed adultery with Peter Wade "because she thought she could get her divorce more quickly." She retracted the confession in court, he added.

Mr. Tahboub said Yvonne who spent two nights in prison, had asked for her children to be with her in jail because she feared they might otherwise be abducted by Mr. Campbell.

Local officials said they were surprised at what they called a "British media outcry" over the affair. British newspapers have flown reporters out to Sharjah to cover the case.

"We don't see any cause for all this noise... foreign diplomatic and consular missions which take care of their citizens' rights should respect the laws of the United Arab Emirates (UAE)," the newspaper Al Khaleej quoted a Justice Ministry official as

"The UAE's judiciary is fair and fully independent and we do not think that this noise will hamper the judicial process," he

They said they would keep their jobs and they hope — their values. About 300 people waved and took pictures blue jeans - arrived at the Sen try Supermarket for the ceremony. "Obviously our lives are going to change," Robins said at a news conference afterward. Our lifestyle may change, but we hope to keep our values the same." Both said they intend to continue their careers. He is an English teacher and she is a nurse. The payoff from a Power ball Lottery drawing July 7 is the largest sum for a lone ticket. holder in the history of U.S. lotteries. Robins delayed cashing it, however, until he was assured that the lottery would issue separate checks to him and his fiant cee, who have lived together for two years. Dane County Circuit Judge Gerald Nichol granted the wish Thursday. Even split in half, the jackpot for each of them is larger than the previous larges lottery prize in U.S. history going to an individual. A Florida woman won $55.16 million in 1989 drawing. Friday's checks are just for show. Robins, 30, and Devries, 24, will share the money in equal installments — minus what the tax collector gets - for the next 20 years.

Attackers film rape of maid

NICOSIA (AFP) — A 25-yearold Sri Lankan maid was raped by two men in her house here while a third man filmed the scene and a woman took photographs. police said Friday. They said the maid was alone in her employers' house on Thursday when three men and a woman came in, saying they were friends of the owners. But they threatened her with a knife and stripped her while two of the men took turns a woman filmed and took photographs of the attack. Before fleeing the attackers tied her up and gagged the unnamed Sri Lankan maid. Police said the woman, who is in a state of. shock, was recovering in hospital. "In over 30 years of police experience I never imagined something like this could happen," Nicosia's Police Criminal Intelligence Department head Nathanael Papageorgiou said.

Nitrogen dominates Pluto's atmosphere

WASHINGTON (AFP) — Scientists have discovered that Pluto is covered with ice that is 98 per cent nitrogen which probably produces an atmosphere that is mostly nitrogen gas rather than methane as previously believed, NASA announced Friday. It was the first time that nitrogen was clearly detected on the distant planet, located some 4.8 billion kilometres (three billion miles) from Earth, according to National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) officials. Carbon monoxide was also detected for the first time. Methane was detected on Pluto's surface in 1976. "Rather than methane as previously thought, it appears that frozen nitrogen dominates the surface," said Ted Roush with NASA's Ames Research Centre in California. The observations were made in Hawaii with a new instrument on the United Kingdom Infrared Telescope in May 1992. According to researchers, the discovery means that the thin atmospheric layer around Pluto is made mostly of nitrogen, a colourless, odorless and tasteless gaseous chemical element which forms nearly four fifths of the Earth's atmosphere. Pluto, the only planet in the solar system yet to be explored by spacecraft, is smaller than the Earth's moon. Its size, surface and atmospheric composition resemble that of Neptune's moon Triton, which scientists say suggests the two were formed in a similar area in the
